							Transferred to the East Yorkshire Regiment on 2 June 1915 with which regiment Straffen served with its 1st & 3rd (Reserve) Battailons, as well as at the Depot. 							Straffen served in France from 16 July 1915 to 27 September 1916 when he received a gun-shot wound to his right arm. The records aren't entirely clear, but it might be reasonable to assume he returned to service here before receiving a gun- shot wound to his left arm, in October 1917. Thereafter, all service was in the UK.	After 273 years apprenticeship as a Butcher, Straffen became a Groom, which was his occupation at the time of his enlattment. 							While serving with the 1st Battalion, Straffen was promoted to Acting Corporal, on 12 May 1917, then Acting Sergeant, on 31 July 1917 however it appears he may have asked to be returned to the ranks. Certainly, after he was wounded a second time he was posted to the Depot as a Private, on 34 October 1917. There, he was again promoted, to Acting Lance-Coopera, blotter is death is exected, in February 1919.
							On 3 February 1919, Straffen was admitted to Alnwick Military Hospital suffering from UHD (Usual Ductal Hyperplasia) which led to heart failure. A secondary cause of death was Oedema of the Lungs (excessive fluid in the lungs).
							Straffen is not on the Alnwick War Memorial but is commemorated in St. Bartholomew's Church, Whittingham, Northumberland.
							He was awarded the 1914-15 Star, British War 1914-18, & Alled Victory medals (a.k.a. 'Pip, Squeak & Wilfred').
