Introduction

Northumberland Archives holds archive sources related to many environmental issues. This is intended to guide users to some of our collections and papers, but is not a comprehensive list.

More material is listed in our online catalogue.

Using this guide

Please see the catalogue for individual records

You will see this next to collections or series that appear on this list. These could include hundreds of individual records. See below for instructions on how to search a collection.

Individual record – can be ordered

Here a single archival item appears on the list. This can be ordered in the Study Centre. See below for instructions on how to search the rest of the collection.

Unlisted

These collections have not been catalogued by archive staff; you will not be able to find them on our online catalogue. Please contact us if you would like to use this material.

Berwick Archives

Northumberland Archives has offices at Woodhorn and Berwick-upon-Tweed. It has been noted when records are held at Berwick Archives, all others are held at Woodhorn.

Reference numbers

All items in the archive are given a unique reference number when they are catalogued. This number can be used by researchers to order that item.

The reference number is made up of a collection reference and a series of sub-numbers which are divided with a slash [/].

Any letter and numbers before the first slash are the collection reference. For example:

NRO 00672/A/1/A/2 – NRO 00672 is the collection reference.

The whole collection can be found on the catalogue by selecting “Advanced search” and copying the collection reference followed immediately (no spaces) by * [shift+8] into the RefNo field. Select “Search”.
